TELL GROWERS OF APPLE PROSPECTS

Orchardists Lacking Care would Do well to Convert their Tracts into Wheat Fields Mr. Tyson Says before Meeting in Cashtown.

That the fruit growers of Adams County should go very slowly in the matter of planting more apple trees, or urging others to do so, was the warning given at the monthly meeting of the county association held at Cashtown this afternoon. Chester J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, in discussing "The Outlook" said in part:

"Millions of apple trees have been planted, north, south, east and west. Careful estimates show that not half the trees planted in commercial orchards in the past ten years are yet in bearing. The year of 1914 produced a crop that has been mighty hard to market on a profitable basis; 1912 crop was verging on the same condition. Unless apple consumption can be tremendously increased and the cost of distribution greatly decreased, there are bound to be some mighty tough years ahead of us.

"If you have not planted, I say, go slow, consider well. If you own the land, it is entirely possible that corn and grass and livestock may pay better in the years to come than orchards, with much less investment in your plant.

"If you do not own the land, then I say, go slower still. Invest your money in good bonds and wait to see how all this craze will work out. You may live to see the wisdom of this advice.

"As an association and as individuals, it seems to me wiser and far safer to stand for better care of the trees already planted, and for better packing and distribution, rather than for increased planting of apple trees.

"A few people have planted orchards in the past year or two—and are discouraged and feel like pulling out the trees and giving the land back to general farming. If you have good varieties on good apple soil, located right and the trees thriving, and if you intend to give the trees the very best care you know, then I say stick to it, and I feel sure the orchard will pay in the end just as well as any other farm crop would have done.

"On the other hand, the man who has planted apple trees on land not suited for orchard, or who has poor varieties, or who has gotten poor trees that do not grow, or who figures on letting the orchard go its own gait and produce what it will, had better pull out the trees and use the land to grow wheat for the European armies."

Other Addresses

W. W. Boyer, of Arendtsville, addressed the convention on the general subject of "Pruning". Mr. Boyer took up the treatment of both apple and peach trees, and spoke of the pruning methods from the time they were planted as 2-year-olds on through their life. The methods required by the various varieties, and the ways in which they differed from each other were carefully explained, and orchardists urged to study the habits of the trees.

Mr. Boyer urged specially that care be taken in the pruning so that, as far as possible, it should be done in such a way that the necessary thinning is accomplished at the same time—in this way reducing to a minimum the use of the pruning shears and taking out branches which, if allowed to remain, would have to undergo the thinning of the coming fruit.

His second point was the proper method of pruning so as to allow the entrance of the necessary air and sunshine, and his third suggestion was that trees be pruned so that they would be carefully balanced—approximately the same number of limbs being on one side as on another.

C. Arthur Griest, of Guernsey, spoke on the subject of "Peach Growing." There are many young peach orchards in the vicinity of Cashtown and many new growers entering the business so that Mr. Griest spoke specially of the points which he considered most timely.

The selection of a location for a young peach orchard, the conditions necessary to insure the proper selection of a site, the type of trees to be planted, and the preparation of the soil, together with the manner of planting and cultivation, were all touched upon, while he spoke in a general way of the pruning and thinning of the crop and of marketing it.

REVIVAL DRAWS TO SUCCESSFUL END

Four Other Churches to Receive Members as Result of Services Held by Dr. Oyler. [Sunday Evening Marks Final Meeting.

On the eve of the close of the revival services conducted for several weeks in the Methodist church, Dr. R. S. Oyler, the pastor, announces that there have been no less than eighty-six decisions and conversions. Included in the large number affected are those who have announced their preferences for other denominations, so that the series of meetings has had a wide-spread influence in the town.

Not for many years has so successful and extensive a revival been held in the local Methodist church. These results following last year's energetic evangelistic campaign in St. James Lutheran church, which was succeeded by a similar series of meetings in the United Brethren church, are surprising as they are gratifying. And it is confidently believed that, had not the quarantine interfered, the number of converts would have reached the century mark, for a number were prevented from attending whom it was the intention of the pastor and personal workers to reach.

Dr. Oyler has made no effort to direct into his own church the men and women who have decided for the better life and is allowing them to select their own denomination. Many of them naturally incline to some other church on account of members of their family belonging there and included in the number who have been reached are those who will likely join St. James Lutheran, Trinity Reformed, Memorial United Brethren, and St. Francis Xavier Catholic churches.

Of those who will identify themselves with the Methodist church about one-third have already been received into a preparatory membership. They and all others who prefer this denomination will be formed into a class of instruction next Wednesday evening and Dr. Oyler will hold weekly meetings with them until Easter when the entire class will likely be admitted into full membership.

The sermons throughout were of an earnest and forceful character, the cottage prayer meetings highly spiritual in their conduct, the singing inspiring throughout and, all told, the revival was one of the most successful ever held here.

There were four decisions and two conversions on Friday evening. No service will be held this evening and the meetings will come to a formal close Sunday night.

Sunday evening at seven o'clock a similar series of services will be started in the United Brethren church on West High street.

FIND VIOLATION OF FISH LAWS

Conewago Creek in Adams County Sees Disregard of State Regulations. Prosecutions Threatened if Offenses are Continued.

Commissioner N. R. Buller, of the State Fish Department, has notified the Conewago Game and Fish Protective Association that he has information to the effect that fishermen in the portion of Adams County along the Conewago Creek are illegally using dip nets below the dams, which is a violation of the laws of this Commonwealth.

The law plainly provides that it shall be unlawful to fish in any manner, except by use of rod, hook and line, within 400 feet of the breast of any dam. The department is empowered to change this distance, which, however, so far as our dams are concerned, has not been done.

The purpose of this law is to protect the fish in their annual migration to their spawning beds, it being not uncommon for from 50 to 100 fish to be taken in a few hours, while they are at least temporarily delayed in such migration by the obstruction of such dams.

The department promises to enforce this law in this vicinity as vigorously as possible.

Attention is also directed to the law regulating dip nets. This law provides that the meshes of such nets shall measure at least 2½ inches from knot to knot, stretched measurement. This means that the dip net must be a one and one-quarter inch mesh net, clear of the knots. Many smaller sized nets are being used in the streams of the county, it is said, and the users of same, if apprehended, will be forced to pay fine and costs.

GERMANS DROP BOMBS ON VERDUN

100 Explosives Are Hurled on French Fortifications.

FIERCE FIGHT IN ARGONNE

Kaiser's Forces Made Furious Attack, But Were Repulsed by Infantry and Artillery.

London, Feb. 13.—German aviators have bombarded the great French fortifications at Verdun, on the Meuse, the Berlin war office says. One hundred bombs were dropped on the forts there.

The battle in the Argonne region, which raged with fury for a couple of days, appears to have abated for the present, for reasons not set forth in the French official report.

This communication says the Germans are bombarding Tracy-le-Mont, on the west center of the battle line. Near La Boisselle, above the "elbow" of the line on the west, the Germans exploded a mine at the end of one of the French trenches, but the French maintained their position. Artillery duels are reported along the rest of the front.

The fighting in the Argonne, according to French accounts, was of a desperate character.

Six thousand German troops, advancing in massed formation four ranks deep over a front of one-third of a mile, made a furious attack on the French earthworks at Marie Therese, near Bagatelle.

French infantry was sent out to meet them and the result was one of the most violent battles that has taken place in this region. The enemy was obliged to retire when the French gunners got the range and sent shell after shell into the closely-packed lines. A large number of German dead were left on the field.

The fighting in the Bagatelle region began Wednesday and continued all night. The forces at first were not large, but at nightfall the Germans had more than a full brigade in action and made desperate attempts to make a breach in the French front.

In the early part of the engagement the French losses were serious, but when the Germans had recourse to their old tactics of an attack en masse the French casualties became unimportant by comparison.

The French war office reports follows:

"Between the sea and the Somme Thursday saw artillery fighting. To the south of La Boisselle the enemy exploded a mine at the end of one of our trenches. We, however, retained our position.

"From the Somme to the Argonne there has been reported nothing more than the bombardment of Tracy-le-Mont by the enemy and the activity of our artillery in the sectors of Rheims and of Soissons.

"The Woëvre district witnessed a fairly spirited cannonading on the part of the Germans in front of Rambucourt and the forest of La Hazele. We bombarded the railroad stations at Thiaucourt and Arancville."

German Official Report.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The following official statement was issued at army headquarters under date of Feb. 12:

"In the western war theater only artillery duels took place. The enemy expended an enormous amount of ammunition against German positions in Champagne without gaining any success worth mentioning. Near Souain the enemy attempted an infantry attack, but was repulsed with the loss of 120 prisoners.

"The number of prisoners in the Argonne was reported to have been increased by one officer and 119 men. Northwest of Verdun several of the enemy's trenches were taken. A French counter attack, made under a Geneva flag, was repulsed with considerable loss for the enemy.

"The fortress of Verdun was shelled by German aviators with about 100 bombs. At Sudekopf, in the Vosges, the French succeeded in occupying a small outpost trench in front of the German positions there."

The Geneva flag referred to is the emblem of the Red Cross, adopted at the international convention at Geneva in 1864.

FANNY CROSBY.

Blind Hymn Writer Dies In Her Ninety-fifth Year.

FANNY CROSBY DEAD; FAMOUS HYMN WRITER

Author of 8000 Songs of Worship Passes Away.

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 13.—Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writer, author of about 8000 hymns, died here after a long illness. She would have been ninety-five years old on March 24 of this year.

Fanny Crosby, in private life Mrs. Frances Jane Van Alstyne, was born in Southeast, N. Y. She became blind when six weeks old, due to hot poultices applied to her eyes during an illness, thus destroying the optic nerve.

In 1858 she was married to Alexander Van Alstyne, a blind teacher of the school in which she formerly was a teacher. He was a brilliant musician and a fine classical scholar.

Soon after the death of her husband, in 1902, she wrote a group of hymns, including "Only a Step to Jesus," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," "Jesus, Keep Me Near the Cross," "To the Work," "Blessed Assurance," "I Am Thine, O Lord," "Only a Beam of Sunshine," "Rescue the Perishing," "Just a Word for Jesus" and "Saved by Grace."

Some of her best known songs are "There's Music in the Air," "Jesus the Water of Life Will Give," "Hazel Dell," "The Honeysuckle Glen," "Rosalee," "The Prairie Flower." Her cantatas, "The Flower Queen" and the "Pilgrim Fathers" had a great deal of popularity in their day.

CZAR CHECKED IN EAST PRUSSIA

Petrograd Admits Retreat Before Strong Force.

VICTORY IN CARPATHIANS

From East Prussia to Caucasus, 1500-Mile Line Is Locked In a Great Battle.

Petrograd, Feb. 13.—Further explanation of the retirement of the Russian forces in East Prussia is made in an official statement, which says:

"It is believed we are upon the eve of a great operation which must solve definitely the struggle in East Prussia."

Warning is given that because of the necessity for military secrecy little information may be expected regarding the operations which are about to begin. The Russians are seeking the shelter of their own fortresses, the statement asserts, before attempting to take "more concentrated" locations from which to oppose the heavily reinforced Germans.

The Russians claim the garrison of the fortress of Przemysl is exhausting itself in fruitless sorties. A final repulse of the Germans who temporarily occupied the heights of Koziouka, after twenty-two assaults, is reported. The communication follows:

"It has been established that recently there have appeared in East Prussia four new corps (160,000 men) of the German army, consisting partly of troops transported from the west front, partly of new recruits and partly of reserve forces.

"This radically changed conditions and involved the necessity of our troops retiring in order to facilitate reposition to locations more concentrated. This object, it was believed, could be better attained upon our own territory in the shelter of our fortresses.

"This circumstance renders it necessary that few inquiries be made concerning future combats, taking account of the strict necessity for the observance of military secrecy.

"After twenty-two frustrated attempts the Germans succeeded in occupying in great force, after a desperate struggle, the heights of Koziouka, but were dislodged after a violent bayonet attack, leaving 400 dead on the field."

Greatest Battle in History On.

London, Feb. 17.—The greatest battle of all time is taking place on the eastern front of the war.

Battle is following battle in one continuous thunder of rifles, artillery and hand-to-hand combat over a field 1500 miles long. From Tilsit, in the northeast corner of East Prussia, where German reinforcements apparently are holding the Russians in check, through the marshes of southern East Prussia and Poland into the passes and over the defiles of the snow-covered Carpathians to Bukovina and on the lofty Caucasus, the armies of the czar, single-handed, are fighting the Germans in their attempt to break through to Warsaw.

The latest available official reports of the fighting show Russia's greatest success to have been in the Carpathians, where the Austro-German offensive has broken against the Russian defense and the bitter weather encountered in the mountains.

While the Teuton allies in the eastern part of the range seem to have been strong enough to compel the Russians to retire from Bukovina, the Russians appear after the fierce battles of last Sunday to have almost complete command of the middle and western portion of the mountains.

The Germans are transferring men and guns by their splendid strategic railways and have assumed the offensive on the East Prussian border and on the right bank of the lower Vistula, where an advance has brought them into the district of Sierpoc, which the Russians occupied some time ago.

It is impossible to say yet whether the next big battle will take place in this district or in East Prussia, as Grand Duke Nicholas, with whom the initiative remains, has not disclosed his intentions. He may either strike between Tilsit and Insterburg, in East Prussia, or threaten to cut Field Marshal von Hindenburg's communications with Thorn by a movement along the lower Vistula.

Germany Shifts Troops.

Amsterdam, Feb. 13.—Large bodies of German troops are being taken from the West Flanders war zone for service in the eastern theater of war. Railway traffic has been suspended for several days. From Feb. 1 to Feb. 5 large forces were transported from the western theater of war to East Prussia.

34 British Aeroplanes Bombard Belgium Towns.

London, Feb. 13.—The British aerial division made an attack in force on the German positions in Belgium.

There were thirty-four air craft in the attack, and considerable damage was inflicted by the bombs dropped by the aviators on Middlekerke and Ostend.

Claude Grahame-White, the flight commander, fell from his machine on Nieuport, but was rescued from the ocean uninjured by a French war ship.

The following account of the raid was issued by the British official information bureau:

"The secretary of the admiralty makes the following announcement: "During the last twenty-four hours combined aeroplane and seaplane operations have been carried out by the naval wing in the Bruges, Zeebrugge, Blankenburghe and Ostend districts with a view to preventing the development of submarine bases and establishments. Thirty-four naval aeroplanes and seaplanes took part.

"Great damage is reported to have been done to the Ostend railway station, which, according to present information, has probably been burned to the ground. The railway station at Blankenburghe was damaged and the railway lines were torn up in many places.

"Bombs were dropped on gun positions at Middlekerke and also on the power station and the German mine sweeping vessels at Zeebrugge, but the damage done is unknown.

"During the attack the machines encountered heavy banks of snow. No submarines were seen.

"Flight Commander Grahame-White fell into the sea off Nieuport and was rescued by a French war vessel, although exposed to a heavy gun fire from rifles, anti-aircraft guns, machine guns, etc.

"All of the pilots are safe. Two machines were damaged."

RUSSIANS NOT TIRED OF WAR

German Correspondent Finds No Clamor For Peace Move.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The National Zeitung publishes the following dispatch from a correspondent on the Russian border:

"It must be truthfully admitted that there are no signs of the Russian people becoming tired of the war. A small peace party exists at the court of Emperor Nicholas, but it is without influence.

"In most of the more important Russian cities recruits in considerable numbers are being drilled. These men are in part excellent material, but the weapons with which they are supplied leave much to be desired."

DUTCH ALSO WARN GERMANS

Send Sharp Demands That Their Ships Be Protected.

London, Feb. 13.—The Netherlands government has sent an emphatic note in answer to Germany's war zone proclamation, in which it is pointed out that ships carrying the Dutch flag must be protected.

The note points out that, unless full protection is accorded to Dutch ships and Dutch citizens, the Netherlands government will be compelled to take such steps as it considers necessary for the protection of its citizens and its vessels.

Australian Meat Seized For Armies.

W., Feb. 13.—The British government has requested all the Australian states to secure all the meat available for export during the war, as large quantities will be necessary to meet the needs of the British army. France also will require a considerable supply. The commonwealth parliament has unanimously passed a bill authorizing the measures necessary to this end.

At Fairfield Sunday will be observed as "Go to Church" day, everybody being urged to attend Sunday School and at least one church service.

LAMP FLASHES CALL HELP.

Volunteers From Steamship Philadelphia Take Crew From Sinking Ship In Raging Sea—Rescued Boats Barely Miss Being Smashed Despite Oil Poured Upon the Water.

By splendid seamanship and under the most adverse conditions, the steamship Philadelphia rescued Captain Segebarth and the crew of thirty-two men of the American Petroleum company's tank steamer Chester on Friday, Feb. 5, in midatlantic. Their vessel was left sinking.

On Thursday morning at 1:30, ship's time, Captain Mills, on the bridge of the Philadelphia, telephoned to Jones, the wireless operator, to establish communication with a vessel off to port.

Jones threw in his wireless and gave several calls, but received no answer. The captain then telephoned to Jones to come to the bridge. There he saw that the vessel, which was almost hidden in the dark, was signaling with lamps, using the Morse code.

Signal lamps were brought to the bridge and Jones soon established communication. The Philadelphia asked, "What is the matter?" and the answer came back in flashes: "We are wrecked! We are sinking, and our boats are useless!"

"Do you want to be taken off?" the Philadelphia asked, and the answer came back quickly, "Yes, yes, we are sinking."

Captain Mills, with the sea running high and a storm about to break, refused to order boats to the rescue. He decided to call for volunteers.

Every Man Volunteers.
The officers and crew of the Philadelphia were all on deck, and the captain asked who wanted to go. All the officers and every man came forward.

With great difficulty, owing to the rolling of the ship, the port emergency lifeboat was swung over with Chief Officer Candy and six sailors. For a time the waves threatened to smash the boat against the side of the Philadelphia, but the vessel worked forward, and the boat got clear and disappeared in the misty aether.

Two hours later Chief Officer Candy hailed the Philadelphia and by daring work got under the lee of the vessel and was hoisted aboard with twenty-two of the crew of the sinking Chester and his boat full of water.

He told Captain Mills that there were others, including Captain Segebarth and officers, on the wrecked ship, and preparations were made to send another boat. The men of the first boat wanted to go back, but they were too nearly exhausted, and another boat, with First Officer Lyons and seven men, was lowered.

Just as the boat touched the water a wave broke against the side of the Philadelphia and half filled it. It seemed foolhardy to go on, but before the boat could be recalled it had been lost in the gloom.

The Philadelphia steamed as near to the Chester as possible, and for a time it was thought that the first officer and his men were lost. It was just before dawn, and nothing could be seen but the Morse flashes of the lamp on the sinking tanker.

Preparations were being made to send another boat, but as it grew lighter the lifeboat was seen alongside the Chester.

Jump For Life Into Sea.
One by one the remaining men were seen to go overboard from the Chester, and as the lifeboat rose on the waves its crew could be seen dragging them out of the water.

Four hours after starting First Officer Lyons returned with the captain, officers and engineers of the doomed tanker, and they were swung on board without mishap.

All the officers and crew, thirty-three in number, were saved. Captain Segebarth reported that they had encountered very heavy weather and that two days before the bridge and chart room had been swept overboard and the boats smashed. The vessel's steering gear was carried away, and for forty-eight hours she had been helpless. The Philadelphia was the first vessel sighted, and the Chester, carrying no wireless, was unable to call for help.

Captain Segebarth said he had almost given up hope of rescue, as his vessel was on the northern route, which is used by few ships at this time of year. The Philadelphia was on that route in the hopes of avoiding the weather that was reported on the southern route.

Before quitting his ship Captain Segebarth set the wreck afire. She carried 1,850,000 gallons of oil. While standing by the Philadelphia poured oil on the waves.

Odd Happenings In the War News

All stray cats in Lebanon and Damascus have been commandeered by the Turks to protect army stores from rats.

Germany has a new war biplane which can remain in the air ten hours, carries a ton of explosives and four passengers and has 225 horsepower engines.

Baby Sayre, grandson of President Wilson, has through his aunt, Miss Blanche Nevins, contributed $10 to the Belgian relief fund in Lancaster, Pa., Miss Nevins' home.

Believing Saloniki was still in Turkey, the Salonikan authorities held up as war contraband seven carloads of flour shipped from Kenora, Ont., to that place, which has been in Greece since the last Balkan war.

Russia has notified the United States that foreign relief expeditions for the benefit of German and Austrian prisoners will not be permitted, but distributions may be made through the Russian military authorities.

Oiga Krasnikoff, a nineteen-year-old girl, fought in nineteen battles in Poland before she was wounded in the foot and her sex was discovered. A fourth degree St. George's cross has been awarded her in the Moscow hospital.

WARRING NATIONS HAVE BOUGHT 75,000 HORSES.

No Danger of Shortage In This Country, Expert Declares.

Warring European nations have bought and exported more than 75,000 horses from the United States, but there is no immediate danger that continued exports will cause an acute shortage of horses in this country, says C. A. Bell of the bureau of animal husbandry in the Agricultural Outlook.

"We could sell two or three times the number already exported without there being any appreciable shortage of work horses," the statement adds. "The kind purchased are for the most part very mediocre animals, which would ordinarily sell for less than $100 per head, and are a class of which we can well afford to be rid."

"The big demand for horses will probably occur after peace has been declared. At that time the countries now at war, with the exception of Russia, will no doubt be very short of horses for their agricultural and other work. European Russia had prior to the war about 25,000,000 horses. This country and Russia together have 50 per cent of all the horses in the world. A very large number of horses in Russia will be destroyed in the war, and the remainder will no doubt be needed by Russia for her own agricultural and other work."

"The demands on the United States, which has one-fourth of the world's horses, will therefore be large and will probably continue for a number of years, for the rehabilitation of the depleted horse stock of any country is a slow process. This country, however, will be in a position to meet this demand."

AERO COMMUTERS' STATION.
Committee Inspects Site and Pro-nounces It Ideal Terminal.
Owners of flying boats and hydro-aeroplanes who may wish to commute in them the coming summer will have a landing station provided by the Aero club at Seventy-second street and the East river, New York city.

A committee of the club inspected the site and pronounced it ideal for an air terminal for business men who live up Long Island sound, on Long Island or in Connecticut, and who may wish to cut down the commuting time of express trains or even fast steam-yachts by using flying boats.

The Automobile club has offered all the facilities of its new garage and clubrooms recently opened in Seventy-second street. There the flying boat owner can pick up a motorcar for the final lap of his dash to his office as well as leave his car when he takes to the air returning home in the afternoon.

The committee of the Aero club, which approved the plan waxed so enthusiastic that it pointed out that even Newport might be placed within the commuting zone with mile a minute air craft. It is also planned to establish a landing on the Hudson river.

WIRELESS ON HIS AUTO.
Cornell Student Sends Messages Ten Miles As He Motors.
O. E. Ruckgaber of Brooklyn, a senior in the college of civil engineering at Cornell university, has experimented successfully with an automobile wireless, and his car is believed to be the first in the country fitted to carry such an outfit.

Two copper wires strung from the top of the automobile come together at the outer point of the engine hood. The sending apparatus is carried on one of the seats. Ruckgaber placed the apparatus on his car without any assistance and after two weeks' experimenting sent messages ten miles under proper atmospheric conditions.

He is confident that further experiments will permit him to send messages much farther.

Destroying the Mosquito.
The way to destroy the mosquito in its larval stage is to pour a little kerosene on the surface of the pool or stream inhabited by the industrious wiggler. The oil shuts out the supply of oxygen from the water beneath. The wiggler rises tall first to the surface and tries to force his breathing tube through the thin layer of oil. He fails and promptly dies from suffocation—a suitable death for so fruitless an insect.

Valentine, Presbyterian and Martyr

By Julian de Kestel-Hankin

"WHY, yes, he was a saint, if you must know"—
(I gazed into her eager, questioning eyes,
Nor envied any saint in Paradise)—
"A priest who lived in Rome long years ago,
He healed blind girls and lost his head, and so
We keep his feast in inappropriate wise
With kisses, gifts, and amorous follies,
While in the shrine his flickering tapers glow."

"Yet not so inappropriate," quoth the maid,
"Since ever as the good saint's chimes are rung,
Some maiden's eyes are opened to the light
Of love's sweet mastery, and some poor wight,
Silent erstwhile as one that's sore afraid,
Loses his head and thereby finds his tongue."

VOWS and VALENTINES

"GOOD morning," said the floorwalker, leaning over the counter in order to be better able to talk to the girl behind it. "How do you feel on this lovers' day, eh?"

She looked up with a start, and hastily hid her hands behind her. "My, how you startled me! Why, I feel all right!"

"What's that you've got behind you?" the floorwalker interrupted.

"That? Oh, that's nothing. Just an exchange slip to be signed," she replied glibly, bringing her right hand forward as proof of her assertion.

"Let me see the other hand," suggested the floorwalker.

"Won't one hand do?" she parried.

"Let's See the Other Hand."

"No, must see them both," he said firmly.

"Well, there, then," and the thrust forward an empty hand.

"You dropped something behind you," cried the floorwalker, triumphantly.

"You have too many eyes," she pouted, stooping to pick up what she had dropped. It proved to be a valentine, and the floorwalker snickered.

"Jove! I thought that by the time a girl got to be twenty plus she was over that kind of foolishness."

"A girl is never too old to enjoy being made love to," she retorted, "and, in fact, the older she gets the more she likes it."

"Regardless of who does the love-making, I suppose?"

"Oh, no, she has her preferences, of course, and after awhile, perhaps, she gets to have a preference—"

She paused and glanced at the floorwalker, but he was absorbed in the valentine. "And she always enjoys a well-put compliment—"

"Always? Now, I have known girls to snap you off, and tell you not to be silly, and to declare that they hated 'soft fellows.'"

"That's because you didn't pay your compliment at the right time, at the psychological moment, so to speak," she replied. "You probably told them how pretty they looked when they were rigged out in their oldest clothes, preparatory to doing some housecleaning. Now, you should never try to jolly a girl unless she can really flatter herself that there may be some truth in what you say, after all. Never miss an opportunity like the first wearing of a new dress to tell her what a charmer she is, and don't let the occasion slip by on which she wears that favorite pink waist of hers. In other words, catch her in the mood."

"I thought you just said that a girl always liked to be made love to," the floorwalker objected.

"She withered him with a glance. 'But she has other things to think of, once in awhile, silly, except being made love to. Once a year, you know, in Lent, she gets very religious, and centers her mind on things not of the world. As you value her affection, don't attempt to make love to her in the penitential season. But you may start in again bright and early Easter morning. Also, don't make love to her just after she has decided upon her 'career.' She'll get over that in time, but you must let the mad lady run its course."

"How Should I Know?"

"You wouldn't think of talking like that. And I still say that the expression doesn't matter; it's the thought behind it that counts. And even if a man ceases to pay you compliments, that doesn't go to prove that he doesn't still care for you. Still water runs deep, you know."

The floorwalker shrugged his shoulders. "I always said there was no arguing with a woman. A woman convinced against her will— you know the rest."

Not Entirely Heartbroken.

A father who intended to make a great professional man of his son usually manages to conceal his disappointment when the boy signs up for a neat salary as a ball player.

An Umbrella Hint.

Before using a new umbrella or sunshade rub a small quantity of vasoline into the hinge portions of the frame. This will not run like oil, and it is a sure preventive against rust.

BIG WHITE SLAVE PLOT EXPOSED

U. S. Agent Unearths Nation-Wide Conspiracy.

GIRLS SOLD AND RESOLD

Gypsy Chief Confesses That Nomad Bands Have Been Kidnapping Young Women and Disposing of Them in Large Cities.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 13.—A white slave plot, gigantic in its ramifications, is exposed in an official report sent to Washington by William P. Fitch, special investigator for the United States department of justice.

Fitch's report, the result of a secret investigation which he has been conducting for several weeks, is preliminary, but contains some startling revelations, based upon a confession obtained from a gypsy chief.

According to the story told by the man, there has been for several years an organized traffic in girls who have been stolen by gypsy bands in various parts of the country, and sold to white slave markets at prices ranging from $200 up to $2500. The average price for girls, he said, was $1500.

Most of the girls stolen by these gypsies were taken to Kokomo, Ind., and there held until they were sold in the slave markets. These latter, it is declared, exist in all parts of the country, and include New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Dallas, New Orleans and Indianapolis.

Extraordinary efforts have been made by the federal officials to keep the story of the investigation from becoming public. A reporter, listening at the door of Fitch's office, heard the gypsy making his confession, and it was confirmed by Fitch, but he demanded that it be kept out of print.

Fitch declared that he had names and addresses, figures and dates on about 100 cases in various parts of the country where sales of girls were made. These are contained in the report he sent to Washington, but he declined to give them out.

Specific instances of cases where girls were sold for prices ranging from $1000 to $2000, and in some cases resold or "farmed" to white slave institutions in Denver, Chicago, Pueblo, Kansas City and other cities, which are contained in the report compiled by Fitch, are said to be the first authentic information the department of justice has so far been able to obtain in its investigation of the nomad tribes.

The swarthy chief of a Denver gypsy tribe made affidavit before Mr. Fitch that he and his wife have $500, 000 in banks in Chicago and more than $40,000 in Denver, and told all he knew concerning the traffic in girls of his tribe and the relation that traffic has with white slavery.

In fear of death this chief told Fitch that for several years gypsy bands in all parts of the country have traded in girls, obtaining for them sums seldom below $1000. The traffic began with gypsy girls, husbands of ten selling their wives, and recently has extended to white girls.

The gypsy declared that he knew of at least 100 cases in which girls of his race had been sold by their fathers, brothers or other guardians to members of his tribe. He gave the names of various members of his tribe and the names of the girls they had bought and sold.

"I have seen as high as $2500 paid out for a girl," he said. "The girls have little choice in the matter and are sold without having the privilege of effective protest."

KLEIST JURY DISCHARGED

Judge Rules Statements of Gang Attacks Would Unduly Influence It.

New York, Feb. 13.—Judge Hand discharged the jury in the case of Max F. Kleist, former chauffeur, who sued his father-in-law, Edward N. Breitung, millionaire banker and ship owner, for $250,000 for alienation of his wife's affections.

The judge ruled that the published statements regarding two alleged assaults committed on Kleist by gangsters would have had the effect of unduly influencing the jury.

The jury was discharged after Judge Hand had placed on the stand several newspaper reporters, who testified that Kleist made the statements before the opening of court.

Acquit 19th Woman of Murder.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Belle Beasley was acquitted of the murder of her husband last November, making the nineteenth woman to be tried and found not guilty of murder in Chicago during the last four years. When Mrs. Beasley was arrested she was standing over the body of her husband, holding a newspaper clipping telling of the acquittal of seventeen Chicago women charged with murder.

Hold Wheat For $2.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 13.—Farmers in the local markets estimate that nearly 100,000 bushels of wheat, about half of which is in New Castle county, is being stored in granaries and waiting for the price to go to $2 a bushel. While the Chicago wheat pit price has been $1.70 a bushel, the highest price the Delaware farmers can get ranges from $1.25 to $1.30.

INSULTED FLAG: STORE FAILS

From Prosperity a Year Ago Business Dwindled to Ruin.

Sunbury, Pa., Feb. 13.—Because a Greek clerk thoughtlessly trampled an American flag under his feet in his store is the unusual cause given for the failure of the Sunbury Candy Kitchen company, a firm of Greeks, which went into the hands of John W. Bassler, assignee.

The assets are $2000, with liabilities of $3800. It is the largest confectionery in the northern part of Pennsylvania.

About a year ago, when the firm was flourishing, a young Greek clerk was brought to Sunbury from Philadelphia, and was alone in the store when some boys twitted him, crying: "Greek flag no good."

Enraged, he seized a small American emblem and trampled upon it. In a minute the store was a center of a full-sized row. Officers saved the clerk from a severe pummeling.

REJECTS COMPROMISE ON SHIPPING BILL

President Wilson Refuses to Accept House Plan.

Washington, Feb. 13.—President Wilson rejected the compromise ship bill evolved by the Democratic leaders of the house.

The president refused to agree to an amendment terminating the activities of the government in the shipping business two years after the close of the European war.

Plans to bring up in the senate a clause rule which the long filibuster has suggested were knocked away in the senate when the rules committee decided to report adversely both the Williams clause plan and the Owen clause plan. It laid aside the Norris plan for further consideration. The attitude of the rules committee probably means that no clause plan can be adopted by the senate this session; and in the absence of clause the passage of a ship purchase measure is impossible save through compromise—something not yet effected.

Meanwhile it appeared that the sentiment in favor of getting through with the waiting appropriation bills was growing. The administration Democrats, however, reiterated their hopes and President Wilson's determination to pass a ship purchase bill even if it takes an extra session to do it.

NOT TO CASH CHECKS

Court Compels Liquor Dealer to Lose For Being Accommodating.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 13.—Saloon-keepers who cash pay checks will not be considered fit persons to conduct saloons, according to a statement by Judge H. A. Fuller from the bench, when Charles Dula, of Nanticoke, was on trial for having had the prokure of a saloon in Nanticoke cash a pay check which belonged to Dula's brother. The judge would not direct Dula to return the money.

In disposing of the case the court said: "That the practice of saloon-keepers in cashing pay checks is one that the court emphatically condemns, and when it is brought to our attention will affect the granting of any license to any person who after this persists in cashing pay checks. Any saloonkeeper cashing pay checks is unfit for the business."

WOMAN KILLED; SISTER HURT

Horses Run Away and Throw Sleigh Occupants Against Pole.

Huntingdon, Pa., Feb. 13.—Miss Emma Cunningham, forty-five years old, of Penn township, is dead, and her sister, Miss Ella Cunningham, is in the Blair hospital seriously injured, caused by a runaway in South Huntingdon.

The sisters were driving to town in a sleigh when their horses, becoming frightened, ran against a telegraph pole. Miss Emma Cunningham was hurled against the pole and sustained a fractured skull. Her sister suffers from shock, a broken right arm and internal injuries.

Woman, 92, Burns to Death.

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Miss Martha McDonald, ninety-two years old, was burned to death at her home, 4591 Kingsessing avenue, when her clothing caught fire from a small oil stove. The aged woman wrapped herself in blankets in an attempt to extinguish the flames, which quickly ate into her clothing. Before her niece, who was in another part of the house, could rush to her aid she was dead.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

OYSTERS FOR LENT.

WHEN the ordinary fare prescribed for Lent begins to pall upon the taste shellfish may be alternated with fish. Oysters, canned or fresh, are to be had everywhere. Clams and mussels are also available canned. Fresh oysters may be prepared in the following appetizing ways:

Popular Methods.

Broiled Oysters.—Take two dozen large, firm oysters, dry them in a cloth and lay them on a heated wire broiler. Brown over a quick fire and transfer to a hot dish in which you have melted a couple of tablespoonsful of butter. Dust the oysters with salt and pepper and serve at once. A little lemon juice added is an improvement.

Creamed Oysters.—Drain oysters, put in saucepan and boil until the shells curl, then cover with a cup of cream sauce.

Another and quicker way is to put the oysters with a tablespoonful of butter; when cooked add one tablespoonful of flour which has been mixed with a little cold water; add half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, half a teaspoonful Worcester sauce add much to it. Serve on squares of thin toasted bread; garnish with parsley. If stuffed olives are at hand three cut into thin rings and put around the edge makes a very attractive looking dish.

Watch the Fire.

Scalloped Oysters.—Take one quart oysters, one pint melted milk, scant cupful butter before it is melted, two eggs beaten light, pepper and salt to taste, twenty crackers rolled fine. Stir milk, eggs, butter, seasonings and crackers together, then stir in the oysters and liquor lightly. Butter your baking dish, turn in mixture and bake a light brown three-quarters of an hour. Be careful fire is not too hot, or the mixture will be hard on the sides.

Devilled Oysters.—Take large oysters having shells with deep lower halves.

For a pint of oysters make a sauce by cooking a tablespoonful each of finely chopped onion and parsley in one and one-half tablespoonsful of butter. Add two tablespoonsful of flour and three-quarters of a cupful of thin cream, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and made mustard, a few drops of Worcester-shire sauce and a few grains of cayenne. Add the oysters, slightly chopped; remove from fire and stir in two beaten egg yolks. Put the mixture in deep halves of oyster shells, allowing two oysters to each shell; spread with buttered crumbs and bake until well browned. Two shells are enough for each portion. Serve with the small ends of the shells touching, and at each side place a thick slice of lemon with a sprig of parsley set in the center.

Anna Thompson.

Various Views of the Snow.

The farmer calls the snow the poor man's fertilizer. It keeps the ground warm and puts dollars—prespectively—in his vacant pockets. It is much esteemed by artists, who use almost every color except white when they set out to paint it. Their favorite tints for this purpose are pink, purple and a slaty blue. It seems to be the chief business of artists to inform us courteously but firmly, that our eyes are liars.—Exchange.

Explaining "Memory."

When you speak of others as having a good memory, you do not mean that at all. Instead of meaning that the man with a "good memory" has accurately perceived an event in the full ramifications of all its details, and recorded it in his whole human texture ready for reproduction at will, what you really indicate is that he has good power of retention, irrespective of detailed accuracy or faithfulness of the full recollection.—Dr. Leonard Keene Hirschberg.

perforations, then turn under the hem as notched. The center of the front and center of the back of the waist are pinned to corresponding parts of the yoke, after which the gathers should be evenly distributed. Baste the yoke to the waist carefully, so that after it is stitched there will be no frayed or irregular edges. The collar is now added to the neck, but if the round outline is preferred cut out neck edge of yoke on small "o" perforations. The skirt comes next. Beginning at large "O" perforation, close center-back, continuing to lower edge, then finish the edges above for the opening. Pleat, creasing on lines of slot perforations; bring folded edge near center-back to seam and bring remaining folded edge to line of double "oo" perforations; press pleats. Turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations; gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew skirt-band to center edge of skirt, notches and centers even; fold through center; fell remaining edge over seam. Work buttonholes in skirt-band at center-front and at single small "o" perforations and sew buttons on stay to correspond for adjusting. The belt is now adjusted into place, as the final stage of the work. To relieve the plainness of the material, it is a pretty idea to stitch a few rows of mercerized braid along the upper and lower edges of the belt and on the collar and cuffs.

Mirth and Despair

By F. A. MITCHEL

The great European war has brought out the woman spy. Here is a story connected with a woman spy of 1870.

Martin Lemoyne was much interested in his family tree. The Lemoyne came from France, and Martin traced his ancestry there. About the beginning of the present century he went to France and after considerable hunting found the branch of the family to which he belonged. They lived in the department of the Marne on a road over which the Germans in 1870 marched to Paris.

Lemoyne's relatives received him cordially and were quite curious about one of the family who had become an American. He was about thirty years old at the time and admired very much one of his cousins—many times removed—a young girl of twenty. Louise Lemoyne captivated him by her very pleasant laugh, which rang out on all occasions. Indeed, it seemed that the natural expression of her face was a smile. There was with this a bit of witchery in her that rendered her doubly attractive. When she smiled on Martin with her lips there was roquetry in her eyes. Men are more apt to be caught by this sort of thing than evidence of character. At any rate, the American fell in love with his French cousin and proposed to take her back to America with him.

"If you knew," she said, "you wouldn't want me."

These were the first words Martin heard her say without the smile.

"If I knew what?" he asked.

"I am not always what you see me. Sometimes I am another person."

"What—two persons in one body?"

"Yes."

"Is your double as lovely as you are?"

This brought back the laugh.

"I will tell you whether I will go with you to America tomorrow—that is, if you ask me again. But you will not."

Martin swore that he would ask her tomorrow and every day till she consented.

That night his room was changed. Why he was not informed. One thing he noticed that pleased him very much. On the wall was hung a portrait of Louise. The artist had caught that smile of hers with all its seductiveness. It seemed to him that she was smiling especially at him. To whatever part of the room he went those mischievous eyes followed him.

He went to bed and to sleep. Presently he was awakened by a flash of light. Some one had put a lamp in the hall, which shone through the transom. Martin was about to turn over and go to sleep when he glanced at that part of the wall where hung Louise's picture. The light shining through the transom faced it and rested on it.

A cold chill ran down Martin's back. What a horrible contrast between Louise with her smile and Louise as she now appeared! The one was the quintessence of innocent happiness, the other despair.

To get rid of the effect of the light on the portrait Martin moved first one way, then another. All he could do by this was sometimes to show more of Louise smiling and sometimes more of Louise in despair.

The lamp without was removed as suddenly as it had appeared, leaving the room in darkness. Lemoyne endeavored to shut out that ghastly look from his mental vision, but it would not go away. It seemed that the subject of the portrait was about to be dragged to the most frightful doom, and he lay wondering what it was. He heard the clock strike every hour between 1 and 7. As soon as it was light he wished to throw off the covers and have a look at the picture, but dreaded to do so, fearing he would encounter that fearful gaze. At last he summoned resolution to do so.

There was the entrancing smile under the mischievous eyes.

When he met Louise that morning she looked at him with a half frightened, half mischievous inquiring expression. He realized for the first time that she had been responsible for what had occurred during the night. But how he had no idea. He turned away from her with a shudder.

"Monsieur not pleased with my double," she said, in a half pleading tone.

Lemoyne turned.

"Explain that portrait," he said.

"Monsieur does not wish me to go with him to America?"

"For heaven's sake, help me to get rid of that awful face."

At this she looked penitent and told him that years ago, before she was born, the Germans, when they invaded France, had passed the house. At the time a woman spy was taken and condemned to death. The night before her execution an artist had caught the expression of despair on her face and had transferred it to canvas. The picture had remained in the house, and recently some one had suggested that in order to do away with the gruesome subject Louise's likeness be painted over it. Whether or not the paint was thin or in some way transparent, in a certain light the two pictures were blended. Louise, yielding to a whim, had arranged that her lover should sleep facing it and had herself held the light in the hall.

Lemoyne was much displeased at what she had done and declined to forgive her for a whole day. Then he repented his offer, and she consented to go with him to America. But before they departed he burned the portrait.

No care can be too great to bestow upon the teeth of children. Medicines that will bleach the teeth or injure the enamel should be taken, if at all, through a glass tube.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

U. S. Golf Association.

Frank L. Woodward of Denver, the newly elected president of the United States Golf Association, is a member of the Denver Country Club and is the retiring president of the Western Golf Association. For several years Mr. Woodward has been a vice president of the association of which he is now the head. A lawyer by profession, he has long been prominent in civic and political affairs of Denver. While not a great player, Mr. Woodward is considered a good one and has done much to popularize the sport in the Rocky Mountain region.

Speaking of the rule defining amateurs and professionals, President Woodward said that the spirit was more important than the letter and that amateurs know instinctively when they are violating the spirit of the rule. Amateur golfers, he said, should be permitted to write for newspapers and magazines without sacrificing their amateur standing, and he favored a liberal interpretation of the rules to the end that the game might be aided by such literary efforts. Mr. Woodward also went on record as favoring abolition for building or designing golf courses and suggested that clubs ought to be allowed to employ their own members in any capacity, always keeping in mind, however, the restrictions outlined in rule 7 of the bylaws.

Excess Ball Players Costly.

A most excellent reason for the new rule limiting all ball clubs to twenty-one players is given by Secretary Foster of the New York Giants in the statement that the "deadwood" last season cost the two leagues more than $200,000.

"Personally I think a limit of twenty-five would have been better," said Mr. Foster, "because it would give the managers a chance to make arrangements for the future, but there are very good reasons for the new limit."

"Very few clubs ever use more than twenty players for actual playing purposes. The rest, therefore, are carried either as prospective youngsters looking for experience or veterans too old to be of actual service, but who have been kept largely through regret at having to let them go. You can estimate that no fewer than fifty of these veterans were carried last year when they were of absolutely no use to the clubs. It was merely burning up $200,000 for the sake of sentiment, and some of the weaker clubs felt that they could not stand it. A saving of that amount of money to organized baseball means a whole lot when we realize how many other purposes it can serve in these rather precarious times."

ARCHIMEDES AND HIS LEVER.

The Feat of Raising the Earth From a Scientific Viewpoint.

"Give me a fulcrum and a place on which to stand and I will raise the earth from its place!" That is a saying popularly attributed to Archimedes. If the required conditions were possible the feat might be performed, but in addition to providing a fulcrum and a place on which to stand Archimedes would also have to be furnished an indefinite lease of life.

To raise the earth a height of one inch by the force which Archimedes would have been capable of exerting would take not only an extremely long lever, but an extremely long time, as can be readily shown.

We shall assume the following data in our calculation: That the earth is a sphere 7,926 miles in diameter and that 5.5 is its mean density; also that the lever has no weight. Should we design a real lever it would be of such enormous size and weight that Archimedes' weight would be a negligible quantity.

If the earth is 7,926 miles in diameter the volume is about 261,000,000,000 cubic miles, or 38,400,000,000,000,000,000 cubic feet, and if the density is 5.5 the weight per cubic foot would be about 344 pounds, which multiplied by the volume would give as the weight of the earth 13,209,000,000,000,000,000,000 pounds. We shall assume, further, that Archimedes weighed 150 pounds and that "the place on which to stand" was some distant star; then, if the fulcrum is one mile from the point of application of the lever to the earth the length of the power arm of the lever, or the distance of Archimedes' "standing place," would have to be 88,064,000,000,000,000,000 miles.

To move the earth a distance of one inch Archimedes' end of the lever would have to move through a distance of 1,388,000,000,000,000,000 miles. Now, if Archimedes should take hold of the end of the lever and apply his weight of 150 pounds to it and should move off into space with the velocity of light, or 186,000 miles a second, it would take him 237,000 years to finish the job he proposed, so that now, nearly 2,200 years after making the famous dictum, he would barely have started the undertaking.—C. O. Sandstrom in Scientific American.

Answered His Question.

Prince George of Denmark was nicknamed "Est-il-possible?" by James II. It is said that when the startling events of the revolution of 1688 succeeded one another with breathless rapidity, the emotions of Prince George found vent in the repeated exclamation: "Est-il-possible?" King James, enumerating those who had forsaken him, said: "And est-il-possible has gone, too!"

Life's High Ideals.

We have more or less true ideals of what our own human life ought to be—of what opportunities we ought to have for the development of our faculties—of what home and school and college, youth and married life and old age, work and rest, ought to mean for ourselves and our families. We are to be as truly zealous and active for other classes or other individuals as we are for our own class or our own family or ourselves.—Charles Gore.

Special Ink Evolved.

As the carbon of ordinary printing inks does not bleach in using printed material for new paper, a French firm has patented a special ink. The black pigment is a compound from tanbark extracts acting on ferrous sulphate, and this is incorporated with resin, or mineral oil and resin, or boiled linseed oil. In repulping the paper the ink is bleached with an acid solution of a hypochlorite, chlorine gas, or hydrochloric or oxalic acid, the pulp being made perfectly white.
